

SEARCHING FOR PUBLIC DOMAIN IMAGES ON THE INTERNET:

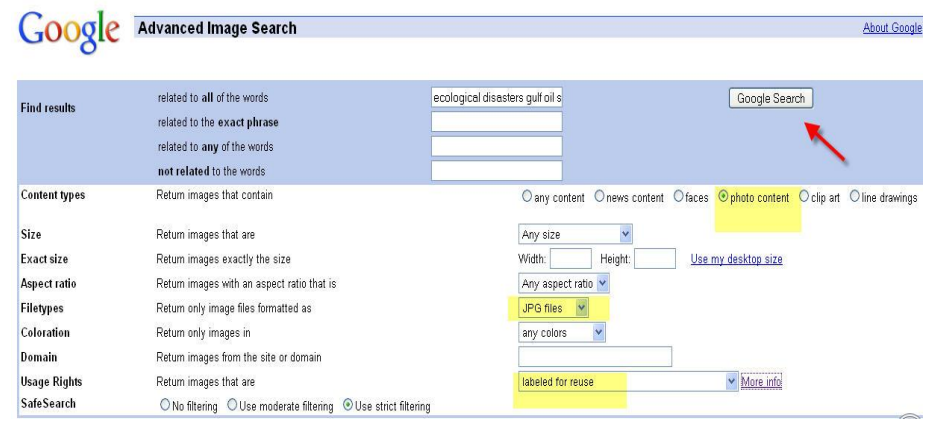

Public Domain means the content is copyright free and students can use the information without getting permission from the original creator, but a citation is still needed.

When using Google as the search engine, type the keywords for what you are looking for and click Images

Initially you will see all images, but you are going to conduct a filter using Advanced Search. Click advanced search located under the Search button

1. Decide if you want photos, clip art or line drawings and under Content type click the radio button of your choice.
2. Choose jpeg as the file type
3. In the Usage Rights drop-down, select one of the following options:
 - Labeled for reuse
Your results will only include images labeled with a license that allows you to copy and/or modify the image in ways specified in the license.
 - Labeled for reuse with modification
Your results will only include images labeled with a license that allows you to copy and modify the image in ways specified in the license.
4. Click Google Search

The images returned are filtered with what you chose in Advanced Search

You can now choose the image and follow directions for Citing an Image from the Internet
